Just came across an old Airco track cutter. Looks like it's an Airco 10 from the photos I see for it. The riveted label is missing from the machine. I've rewired in a new cable for it. It runs, switches direction, speeds up and slows down like it should. We may need to purchase a track for it. The wheels are 6" apart and look to be about 3/16" wide.

Re: Airco 250 heliwelder v. I think that is a machine made for Airco by Miller. It is the same size and shape as the Syncrowave 250, and seems to have all of the same controls, etc. If I am right, Miller parts may work in it. I doubt if you can use it with a wire feeder, but I could be wrong. at a minimum you would need a voltage sensing wire ...

New to welding - Airco CV-250 - Airco AHF-T Feeder This is not a Miller machine, it was built by Midstates. There are probably manuals around under the Airco, Air Products, or Midstates names. The one pound gun that you now see as Profax or earlier as Miller 20E gun was known by Airco as Miget - with the MIG in different letter styles to ...

where to find replacement parts for airco wire feeder ...

i own a red 250 airco tig made around 1985. i m having problems with it pulsing in dc range.driving me crazy ,i replace the 2 caps $60 and its a little better. i would stay away from it, maybe worth 500 with a cooler and good torch. also i can get the boards rebuilt and tested in Calif by a company that has the old essab specs for $85 per board ...

The Airco Dip-Pak was a good machine. The Airco Distributor I worked for sold truckloads of them. But today, if an internal part fails, Arc-Products may charge you an arm an a leg for it. As far as consumables, the machine you are showing the picture of has a Tweco gun on it, so parts are readily available anywhere.
